Nine Forest Fires Reported Burning in Fayette County; Big One Near Breakneck

Large Scape to North of Tan-yard Hollow Is Being Devastated.

ONE IN TATE'S HOLLOW

No less than nine woods fires are burning in Fayette county, according to information received by H. L. Kropp, president of the Fayette County Fire and Game Protective Association. Several of these are in the north end.

One of the worst is to the north of Tanyard Hollow, above Breakneck. Starting yesterday night from Breakneck, the fire was driving today toward the mountain top. In its path was said to be a sawmill. Constable Hillen is in charge of protection of this area and has impressed a large number of men into service to combat it. It was reported here that about a score who were out to watch the fire last night were summoned by the warden to get to work fighting it.

The country home of E. T. Norton, above Gilmore's Mill, was endangered for some time, but fire fighters were believed to have saved it, though the woods all about it was burned over. It was said the blaze had covered a scope of almost four miles long. Frank R. Graham of Grove City, who is here for a visit, and a number of others, joined the fighting forces this morning.

The high wind of today was making progress difficult. The wind was believed, however, to be the forerunner of rain, promised by the Weather Bureau for tonight.

Another fire is reported in Tate Hollow. Here the home of Henry Bauer, between the hollow and Sandy Flat, was said to be in danger of destruction.

From the top of the mountain, along the Springhill pike, fire was said to be visible on the distant mountains. Employees of the West Penn Power Company were sent out today to patrol the lines to Indian Creek and Indian Head and other places in the Indian Creek Valley where there is danger from woods fires.

A fire on the ridge above South Connellsville was plainly visible last night. There was a big squad of about 100, at work most of the night checking its progress and this morning it was said to have been extinguished. A large tract had been burned over and was still smoking.

The flames could be seen climbing to the tops of trees but information was to the effect that little timber had been lost, grape-vines and underbrush being the chief prey of the fire.

Information at Connellsville this morning said there was no blaze in that direction, as reported.

In the opinion of many who are interested in forest conservation, and game as well, the state authorities blundered in throwing the region open to hunting this week, after ordering it closed. Conditions were not a bit better when the reopening order was given than when Governor Fletcher last week issued his closing order. Today the leaves are so dry that any act of carelessness on the part of a hunter is bound to result in a fire.

Thieves Loot Boslet Shop of $700 in Goods

Robbers who entered the Boslet establishment of H. J. Boslet in South Fayette street Thursday night got away with approximately $700 worth of wearing apparel. Some of the goods stolen cannot be replaced for retail value, Mr. Boslet said, speaking of suits, belonging to customers, which had been taken.

The theft occurred some time between midnight and 3:30 o'clock. At 12 o'clock last night Mr. Boslet was in the store and turned out all the lights but one, which was still burning in the morning. He and his family reside in an apartment over the store but they heard no sounds during the night.

Discovery of the robbery was made by James Boslet, a son, who went to open the store. He noticed glass broken from a rear door and called his father.

Entrance was gained from the back, a window pane had been smashed, allowing the thieves to enter. Then glass in a door between the workshop and the front of the store was broken and the lock turned back.

Four overcoats, four suits of clothes, one coat, two pairs of trousers and one vest were taken, together with shirts, ties, hose, cigar cases, cuff links, the gun, and other valuables.

The robbery makes the third in about four years. Just about a year ago thieves got away with goods estimated at about $300.

More Cars Needed For Big Caravan of Fans to Monessen

J. W. McClaren, head of the automobile caravan that will carry several hundred high school students to Monessen for tomorrow's game, was exceedingly busy this morning endeavoring to secure more automobiles. He had approximately 100 and needs quite a few more.

As sufficient owners have not volunteered, Mr. McClaren is endeavoring to reach all he can personally. A final appeal is made to citizens who can, to offer their machines for the caravan.

The first car of the caravan will move off at 12:30 o'clock tomorrow. Students have been notified to gather at the High School at that hour. Miss McKelvin, secretary, giving final instructions this morning. No person without a ticket will be given automobile accommodations. The students will be lined up in orderly fashion and loaded into automobiles as speedily as possible. The Elks Band is going to be among those present and that organization, with the Ukulele Girls, will furnish lots of pep.

J. E. Anglo, W. O. Adrian, Hall Spear and M. B. Pryce went to Monessen this morning and called on the police authorities at that place. A detail of officers will meet the caravan at the city limits and conduct it to the ball grounds. There will be sufficient room inside the grounds for parking of all machines and space will be reserved for them.

Everyone going to Monessen is urged to purchase a ticket at the High School building. Otherwise a complete line-up will result. The sale will be continued there up to noon tomorrow. At noon today 400 had been disposed of.

JOHN W. GREGG DIES OF POISON AFTER TONSILLITIS

John W. Gregg, about 28 years old, of Pittsburgh, died Thursday in the Columbia Hospital, Wilkensburg, from poisoning which developed following an attack of tonsillitis. He had been ill for three weeks.

Mr. Gregg, who is a native of Connellsville, Ind., was married September 2, last, to Miss Helen K. Plann, daughter of Mrs. Katherine D. Plann of Pittsburgh and the late Rev. George H. Plann. Besides his wife he is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Gregg and a brother, Albert Gregg, all of Connellsville, and Mr. Gregg was an employee of the Westinghouse Company at East Pittsburgh. Mrs. Gregg has a number of relatives in Connellsville.

The funeral service will be held tonight at 7 o'clock, from the Plann home in East End avenue. The interment will be made in Connellsville. Among the Connellsville relatives who will attend are Mr. and Mrs. Homer C. Davis, Mrs. John B. Davis, R. S. Davis, Charles W. Davis, and sons of Mr. and Mrs. Gregg, Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Bailey, Miss Lulu Bailey and Miss Irene Davis.

RAIN AND COLD IS FORECAST

Along with news that snow fell during the night to a depth of six inches in parts of Nebraska, the Weather Bureau promises a decided change in the weather Fayette county has been enjoying for six weeks. "Rain and colder" is the noon forecast for tonight and Saturday.

At a meeting of the Ministerial Association this week Rev. E. H. Stevens, president of the association, was delegated to deliver the Thanksgiving Day sermon.

The place will be the United Presbyterian Church.

Warm Weather Brings Blooms

The spring-like weather is responsible for blooming of flowers that ordinarily are seen only in the spring. When H. V. Hendine reached home at noon today he found a "spice bush," botanically known as Spyrithus, in bloom.

Buttercups are peeping out in places.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—Calvin Coolidge of the campaign, silent, cautious, disciple of the political faith which utters no superfluous word or undertakes no unnecessary task, and Calvin Coolidge of tomorrow with the barrier of a third term giving him the strength to be an independent executive, may develop the contrast which for many months his closest friends have been privately predicting.

There is no question but that the personality of Calvin Coolidge is to a large extent unknown as governor of Massachusetts he showed at times qualities of leadership which were not asserted in the past year here as President of the United States, especially in dealing with Congress. The explanation usually made was that in a political year much must be forgiven which ordinarily would not be countenanced.

Enough of the President's attitude toward public questions has been revealed to show that he moves along conservative lines and that once taken his position he is not given to reversals or wavering. But in dealing with Congress the President has not been particularly fortunate. His own leaders have not been able to work out a liaison that was satisfactory. The fact that the balance of power was held by the La Follette Republicans in the two houses of Congress has usually been accepted as an excuse for what has happened, but those who follow the maneuvers of Congress cannot but conclude that many of the advantages obtained by the radicals in the last session of Congress, were due to the mistakes in tactics of the conservative leaders.

With the House in control of the conservative Republicans, there will be a better opportunity for the administration to get its legislation through than before. In the Senate, however, the moderate progressives will still be swinging away from the administration. The Senate will prove the stumbling block for many pieces of legislation which should go.

GREAT BATTLE CRUISERS CHASE ONE ANOTHER

By United Press.

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 7.—The two principal units of the Brazilian navy, the great dreadnaught Minas Geraes, and the Sao Paulo were chasing each other up and down the South Atlantic coast today, while all South America looks on in amazement at the latest development in Brazil's disturbed political situation.

Part of the crew of the Sao Paulo rebelled Monday and, under command of two lieutenants, seized the big vessel and made off to sea, pasting the heavy land batteries in the fort which guard the entrance to Guanabara Bay. Rio's huge harbor, despite an apparently heavy bombardment.

The Minas Geraes took up the pursuit, accompanied by two submarines and with her battleships flying at her masthead.

A bulletin by Dr. John H. Cunningham said "While still unconscious his vitality has not perceptibly changed during the last 24 hours. A small quantity of liquid nourishment was administered with difficulty. The senator's pulse continues good and respiration is about normal."

Short periods of consciousness were reported in the bulletin of the senator.

Forest Fires in Kentucky Menace Oil Storage Tanks

IRVINE, Ky. Nov. 7.—Forest fires sweeping two mountain ranges near here, were within half a mile of several hundred large crude oil storage tanks on the outskirts of Irvine today. Five hundred men are fighting the flames which gained such headway that only heavy rains could stop their advance.

Seven homes outside the town have been destroyed.

Trains Crash in French Tunnel; Two Killed, Many Hurt

By United Press.

ROUEN, France, Nov. 7.—A wreck occurred in the pitch darkness of the mile-long railway tunnel near Rouen last night when the London Express, carrying Americans and many British from Paris to Havre was derailed.

At least two persons were killed and six seriously injured.

Walter Duranty, a Moscow correspondent of the New York Times, had both legs broken.

Four cars of the express, including the diner, left the rails while the train was roaring through the tunnel. Following the crash scenes of wildest confusion ensued.

While rescue workers were struggling with lanterns to get out the victims a freight train crashed into the tunnel and crashed into the debris.

William Roland 100 Tomorrow; to Go for Auto Ride

By United Press.

William Roland, resident of Connellsville for many years and well known throughout Fayette county, will be 100 years old tomorrow. He enjoys remarkable health for a man who is nearing his century mark and possesses all his mental faculties.

Having lost his sight about 15 years ago he has been confined to his home in South Eighth street, Greenwood, most of that time. However when the weather is favorable he is able to sit on the porch for a few hours.

Plans are being made to take him on a short automobile trip tomorrow. A family dinner will also be held at the Roland home and a picture of the four generations taken.

Mr. Roland has two sons, M. J. Roland of the West Side Hotel and William Roland of Trotter, and two daughters, Mrs. Patrick O'Tool of Connellsville and Mrs. Katherine Roland, at home. Mrs. Roland died a number of years ago. Several children are also dead.

North Dakota in Coolidge Column; New Mexico Count Swings Toward President

ALL UNCONSIGNED COAL IN SOMERSET FIELD MOVED OUT

Apparently one result of the election of President Coolidge and removal of the political uncertainty was a sudden movement Thursday of unconsigned coal from the Somerset field.

Approximately 150 cars which had been standing on sidings because of lack of demand were moved out during the day, the entire unconsigned supply being absorbed. All went east.

Another Idle Stack In Blast at Youngstown

YOUNGSTOWN, Nov. 7.—The Youngstown Sheet & Tube Company has lighted its last idle blast furnace at East Youngstown, giving it two out of nine active here. This brings the active list in the district to 21 of 45 again.

The company's new sheet mills at Drier Hill are completed and ready for operation. It is planned to put them under power early this month.

Iron and Steel Buying Will be Stimulated

CHICAGO, Nov. 7.—Although the direct effect of Tuesday's election upon the steel trade here will be several days in developing, there is ample basis for believing that buying will be stimulated.

No one is predicting an avalanche of orders, but that the halt of the past month will be accelerated no one doubts.

Increase Scrap Prices.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 7.—The election result has tended to strengthen the confidence felt throughout the scrap trade particularly among holders. In fact, this tendency has been so marked that dealers with orders to cover found it necessary to raise their quotations as much as 50c a ton on heavy melting steel and some other grades in order to cover.

Inquiries for Plates.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 7.—Inquiries are appearing for the first time in months for plates for future shipment. Several consumers are asking the mills for protection against first quarter delivery, but these mills hesitate to sell so far ahead.

Larger Steel Buying Expected.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 7.—In the past few days the trade has been full of talk of steel buying having been deferred to await the result of the election, and a large volume of business is now expected.

Numerous Small Orders for Iron.

YOUNGSTOWN, Nov. 7.—Numerous small orders for pig iron are reported since election. Steel makers believe that business will rapidly pick up now that the uncertainty has been removed.

Improvement in Iron Sales.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 7.—Continued slight improvement in both inquiry and actual sales features the pig iron market here. A large part of the business is for first quarter delivery.

Price of Pig Iron Advanced.

YOUNGSTOWN, Nov. 7.—The Youngstown Sheet & Tube Company has advanced basic and foundry pig iron at Chicago 60 cents a ton to $21 a ton for base grades.

NEBRASKA HAS 6 INCHES SNOW

By United Press.

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 7.—The first general snow of the winter fell over Nebraska last night, ranging from a light fall in the eastern part to six inches at Crawford.

The Elks Band will lead the procession, followed by all automobiles and floats. Then will come the Firemen's Band with fire equipment and are companies of Connellsville, South Connellsville and Ever-on.

The Uniontown Band, composed of veterans of foreign wars, will lead the division made up of former soldiers and firemen and cavalry companies. The St. Rita's band will lead the Italian fraternal societies.

Next in line will be the Scottdale Band with women's organizations behind it. The Junior Republican Ukulele Club will also make its appearance today. The Connellsville Military Band will lead the numbers, who will bring up the rear. Upon disbanding, they will be in New Pittsburgh street, where dancing will be indulged in, to the music of a big orchestra.

Parade will draw in any kind of costume they desire but cannot mask their faces. No uniforms of any kind will be barred but no face shall be hidden, it was said.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—James A. Drain, national commander of the American Legion, today urged President Coolidge to designate Armistice Day as a national holiday.

In a letter to the President, Drain pledged the Legion's support to all efforts to advance the cause of world peace. He pointed out, however, that the first necessary step toward reaching an armistice must be the convening of a "convention of powers" to reach such an agreement.

SENATE IS REPUBLICAN

By United Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—With latest returns showing North Dakota in the Coolidge column and New Mexico apparently swinging at the last minute to the President, Mr. Coolidge's victory in Tuesday's election has grown and the relative position of the three candidates in the electoral college now is: Coolidge, 332; Davis, 134; La Follette, 13.

By this the President is seen to have come within 22 votes in the electoral college of equalling Warren G. Harding's vote of 404 four years ago.

Senator Brookhart's apparent narrow victory in Iowa and Senator Magnus Johnson's defeat in Minnesota mean the party standing in the Senate will be:

Republicans, 55; Democrats, 40; Farmer-Labor, 1.

The Republican figure is based on the virtual certainty that when Connecticut holds its special election for a successor to the late Senator Brandegee the winner will be a Republican. Among the Republicans 65 are six designated as "independents," so while the Republicans should have no difficulty in organizing the Senate there will be much legislation on which their majority will be dangerously scanty.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—The new Congress will be subject to the firm hand of the Administration, with one of its loyal supporters at almost every post of importance. Unlike the present Congress, which the progressives controlled with their balance of power, the new Congress will have a small, though clear, Republican majority.

Therefore in the organization every committee chairman, even every committee assignment will be shaped as much as possible in the new policy of keeping a Republican Congress in step with a Republican President who has just won a tremendous victory at the polls.

Disposition of Both Buyers And Sellers to Hold Off Makes Coke Trade Duller Than Ever

Producers Count Upon Prices Being Little Higher After Election.

SPOT MARKET UNCHANGED

Occasional Sales Above the Quotable Range; Heating and Smelter Both Quiet; Best Brands Foundry Command 120c. in Excess of $1.50.

From The Weekly Courier, PITTSBURGH, Nov. 5.—Last report recorded the fact that the coke market had been distinctly dull. Now it may be reported that the past week has been the same, only more so. This has been the case in many commodity markets. Reports from the steel industry, for instance, are decidedly of that character.

The Conneltsville coke trade, however, has one distinction. The familiar market report of the past couple weeks has been of the market being dull on account of buyers holding off until after election. The coke market is not thus described, for in the case of coke there has been a disposition of sellers, as well as buyers, to hold off. The coke producers have been counting on prices being at least a little higher after the election.

Inasmuch as negotiations normally start by a prospective consumer inquiring an inquiry, rather than by a prospective producer offering coke, there have not been many opportunities for the coke operators to disclose their position and expectations, but one case is sufficient for a test and there has been one case, that of the inquiry for a moderate tonnage, for first quarter, noted in The Courier report of two weeks ago. To this inquiry the common reply of coke producers was that they preferred not to quote until after the election. They would name a price if the buyer insisted on closing at once, but otherwise they intended to hold off. The low prices that were mentioned were higher than anything that has been done in the market for months. The inquiry was extended to include December, making four months' delivery, but even at that it has lain dormant.

The spot market is not noticeably changed as nothing definite has occurred to move it, prices being as last reported: Spot furnace $1.00-$1.10 Spot foundry $1.00-$1.10 Occasionally a small lot of high grade furnace coke, for non-metallurgical use, goes at $1.15. There is some foundry coke, not gradeable as strictly standard, at slightly under $1.00, while there are a few brands that cannot be had at as low as $1.50.

Heater and smelter cokes have been quiet in the past week. For fairly good grade the market is quoted at both at $2.75 to $2.90, with some different coke sometimes obtainable at under $2.75 and an occasional small lot of particularly good grade going at above $2.90.

Monthly averages of spot coke prices since the first of the year have been as follows:

Month	Price
January	$2.53
February	2.16
March	2.05
April	2.00
May	2.07
June	2.15
July	2.30
August	2.02
September	2.00
October	2.00

The only interesting thing in the local pig iron market in the past week has been the announcement of the Valley basic average for October as compiled by W. P. Snyder & Company. This is an institution in the trade, compiled monthly, not on quotations, but on the actual sales reported by Valley producers in lots of 1,000 tons or over. The average was announced at $18.50, which means that Valley basic was sold during October at $18.50 and that none was sold at above $18.50. There were sales of basic pig iron by producers outside the Valley at the equivalent of $18.50 at Valley furnaces, as reported at the time, but so far as the general trade knew the Valley furnaces were holding $18, and letting the business go by. Now it is disclosed that they sold at $18.50, and this becomes the quotable market, against $19 quotable since the middle of June.

Basic and foundry grades have been very quiet in the past week, with quotations unchanged. The market is quotable as follows:

Grade	Price
Basic	$18.50
Foundry	$18.50

These prices are f. o. b. Valley furnaces, freight to Pittsburgh being $1.75.

Monthly averages of pig iron prices since the first of the year, at Valley furnaces, have been as follows:

Month	Price
January	$21.90
February	21.72
March	22.02
April	22.00
May	22.57
June	22.25
July	22.25
August	22.25
September	22.00
October	22.00

For Both Railroads and Shippers by Reducing Operating Expenses.

MATTER OF CO-OPERATION

"The railways continue to make new records of efficiency of various kinds almost every month," says the Railway Age. "The average number of cars per freight train in August was 42.2. Gross tons per train averaged 1,565. Both of these were new high records. The number of pounds of coal consumed per one thousand gross ton-miles in freight service was 231, and the number per passenger train car mile was 15.2. Both of these, also, were new records of the right kind.

"Unfortunately, owing to no fault of railway management, there is one respect in which the efficiency of freight train performance recently has not been as great as formerly. The average capacity of freight cars and their average weight are constantly increasing. Thus far in the year 1924 the average amount of revenue freight moved in each loaded car has been the smallest in proportion to the average capacity of cars since 1915.

"The tendency of the average capacity of cars to increase faster in proportion than the average load prevailed for a long time before the war. The large increase in freight business that followed the outbreak of the war in Europe resulted in car shortages. The railways urged shippers to load heavier, and in 1917 the average load was 20.7 per cent of the average capacity of cars. This was the best record since 1902. Under government operation the Railroad Administration applied pressure to shippers in various ways to secure heavier loading and in 1918 the record in this respect was the best ever made. The average capacity of cars in that year was 41.6 tons, the average revenue load per loaded car 26.5 tons and the ratio of the average paying load to the average capacity 64.7 per cent. The average load declined to 25.4 tons in 1919, was increased in 1920 almost to the record figure of 1918, and since then has declined again.

"In 1923, when the railways handled the largest freight business in history, the average capacity of cars was 42.7 tons, average tons per loaded car 26.5, and the ratio of the average revenue load to the average capacity 62.1 per cent. The best way to indicate the importance of the decline in the average load per car which has occurred is to try to estimate what it has cost in operating expenses. The experience of 1918 proved that there is a really good reason why cars should not, on the average, be loaded to at least 41.7 per cent of their capacity. If it had been done in 1923 it would have resulted in a saving of more than three billion freight car miles. The average number of cars per train was 29.5. Therefore, assuming the same number of cars per train, the saving in freight train miles would have been about 78,900,000.

"The Interstate Commerce Commission's figures certainly indicate on a train mile basis and these amounted in 1923 to $1.75 per train mile. The saving in the expenses upon the basis of which these quit costs are computed would have exceeded 134 million dollars. The number of freight cars that would have had to be used, and in consequence the expenditures for freight car repairs, would have been reduced, the estimated saving under this head being about $73,400,000. These estimated savings total more than 207 million dollars. It is probably conservative to estimate that if the average load per loaded car had been relatively as much in 1923 as it was in 1918, the operating expenses of the railways would have been a quarter of a billion dollars less than they were.

"On the suggestion of the Car Service Division of the American Railway Association there have been organized throughout the country Shippers' Regional Advisory Boards. These boards, representing shippers of all classes, are admirably adapted to co-operating on behalf of the shippers with the railways in efforts to increase the loading of cars. Only by making operating expenses as low as practicable can it be made possible for the railways to give the shippers lower rates.

"Twenty years ago the average capacity of each freight car exceeded the average revenue load carried in it by less than 12 tons. In 1923 the average capacity of each car exceeded the average revenue load carried in it by 18 1/2 tons. In the first three months of 1924 the average capacity of each car exceeded the average revenue load carried in it by 20 tons. This great increase in the average unused capacity of each car, and the consequent increase in the dead weight being hauled by the railways, is costing the railways directly and the shippers of the country indirectly hundreds of millions of dollars a year which could be saved by heavier loading of cars.

"The railways, however, are helpless to effect this saving without the co-operation of the shippers, because it is the shippers, and not the railways, that load the cars."

Use of Steam Helpful In Coke Making

The quest for a satisfactory method of low-temperature coal distillation has in the past proved somewhat unsatisfactory. High-temperature coking has been brought to a fair degree of perfection, but when an attempt has been made to coking the coal at a low temperature, obstacles have promptly been encountered. Chief of these difficulties has been the excellent insulating qualities of the material treated, says Coal Age.

It is probable that the resistance to heat transfer possessed by many substances such as asbestos, magnesia, leathers, felt, fur, wool, wood and the like results from the large number of small air spaces that the material contains. These may be either cellular or interstitial—that is, air may be entrapped within the cells of the material itself or it may be entrapped within the cells of the material itself or it may exist only between the fibers or granules of the insulating substance. In the first instance the air might be considered as forming an integral and inseparable part of the material; in the second it merely fills the voids between particles.

Air-filled voids in the even char- ges have so delayed heat transfer-once that various agitating devices have been employed. Few have proved themselves commercially important.

Within the past few years a medium has been undergoing development that in the future may play an important role in the low-temperature distillation of coal. This is highly superheated steam. Today steam is being superheated to temperatures which only a few years ago were considered both impossible and dangerous. No particular difficulty is encountered in imparting to water vapor a temperature of say, 1,000 to 1,200 deg. F.

Forcing steam of this temperature through a mass of finely crushed coal in a coke oven displaces the interstitial air and quickly brings the mass to a coking temperature. Experiments performed on coke ovens of this kind show that coke can be made by this means in approximately 2 1/2 hours whereas a much longer period is required for coking by the usual method of heating by the side walls. Gas and other byproducts given off from coal coked by steam are readily separable from it by condensation and scrubbing.

As an industry the manufacture of high-quality smokeless fuels from low-quality smoky coals is yet in its infancy. There is little doubt, however, that it is destined to assume an increasing commercial importance as the years go by. Using a superheated vapor all portions of the charge of coal in the oven would seem to open a wide range of possibilities in this direction.

Receipts of Mayor's Office Over $1,500

A report of the mayor's office for October shows that receipts in that period amounted to $1,575.

There was $1,382 collected in police court fines, $10 from licensees, $103 from license tax, and $20 from dance permits. Of the total of $1,575 a sum of $25, collected for a violation of the motor vehicle law, was turned over to the state, leaving the city's balance $1,550.

Dawes, will preside over the Senate, while the speakership of the House will fall, according to present plans, to either Nicholas Longworth, present floor leader, or to Martin Madden of Illinois, chairman of the Appropriations Committee.

On account of the serious illness of Senator Lodge, Republican floor leader in the Senate, a successor to him will have to be found. Curran, which has never yet been visited, provides that the post must go to the senator of next longest service. Senator Warren of Wyoming comes next in line but because of his age and his devotion to his post as chairman of the Appropriations Committee there is some doubt that he may become floor leader.

In any event, whether Senator Lodge proves able to return to the Senate or whether Senator Warren assumes the name of floor leader, others will assume most of the duties. Senator Curtis of Kansas will undoubtedly attend to the routine responsibilities of the floor leader and Frederick H. Gillett, new senator from Massachusetts, will prove the principal spokesman for the Administration on the floor of the Senate.

Lodge's illness affects the chairmanship of the Foreign Relations Committee. Senator Borah, next in line for the chairmanship, though not sympathetic with all the foreign policies of the administration, especially with regard to Russia, will undoubtedly become the chairman. Another mild progressive, Senator Johnson, of California, is in line to succeed the late Senator Colt as chairman of the Immigration committee.

FARGO, N. D., Nov. 7.—President Coolidge was located North Dakota early today as the independent progressive leaders lost hope of overcoming his lead. With 1,951 precincts counted out of 2,160 Coolidge has 91,321 and La Follette 51,969.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Nov. 7.—With 200 precincts yet to report President Coolidge led John W. Davis by less than 1,000 in New Mexico today. Samuel G. Bratton has defeated Senator Bursum, Republican, by 4,000. Hubbell, Republican, was safely in the lead of Morrow, Democrat, by 6,000 for Congress.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 7.—With all but 231 precincts in the state today complete, President Coolidge had 719,402 votes and Senator La Follette 108,221. The missing precincts are small but isolated.

No Indication of An Extra Session

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—There is no indication President Coolidge would call extra session of Congress. It was declared at the White House. According to White House spokesmen nothing would be gained through extra session of present Congress.

The Paramount

"RARIN' TO GO"—In which Buffalo Bill, Jr., is seen in the leading role, provides splendid entertainment today and tomorrow at the Paramount.

The story, which treats of the pulling over of a vast irrigation operation, was adapted for the screen from the original by Ralph Cummins, and appeared in the Ace High Magazine.

And that's that's where "Rarin' to Go" lives. It's a thrill from start to finish. Among the scalp-tickers is a scene showing the explosion of a half ton of dynamite, with a large bill completely disappearing, a desperate rescue of the heroine by Buffalo Bill, Jr., who grabs the girl out of a speeding auto on a lofty mountain road, to a seat alongside him on his careening bronco, a couple of bang bang bare fist fights between Buffalo Bill, Jr., and the villain, a wild ride down a straight up and down cliff by Buffalo Bill, Jr., on his sure-footed cow pony, the rescue of the girl's father from drowning by Buffalo Bill, Jr., in a sensational swimming exhibition and a whole of a slasher that has the villain going to his death over a 1,500-foot cliff in an auto.

The Orpheum

"THE MAN WHO FIGHTS ALONE"—The feature picture today and tomorrow at the Orpheum, is a Paramount attraction with William Farnum appearing in the stellar role.

There's not a doubt but that William Farnum is one of the most popular western stars in motion pictures today. In this production, a screen adaptation by Jack Cunningham, he is supported by Lola Wilson and Edward Horton and a big cast which includes, among other big names, Lionel Belmore, Dawn O'Day and George Irving.

The story has to do with a civil engineer and his hand of empire building—a sort of advance guard of civilization which is preparing the great western vastness for the endless tide of humanity which is to follow. It's a story of a strong man's fight against great obstacles—both physical and mental, the kind of story with which Farnum's name has become associated—a tale of the great outdoors, a real man's story, with a delightful love theme running throughout—a romantic story of love and sacrifice that will restore your faith in motion pictures as a medium of both instruction and entertainment.

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Pola Negri will be seen in "Men."

The Soisson

"BEAU BRUMMEL"—Showing today and tomorrow at the Soisson, is an adaptation of the famous Clyde Fitch play, starring John Barrymore, noted actor.

Barrymore throws all his unique talent to interpret the georgianness of life, the singularity and dramatic quality of Beau Brummel, who began life obscurely, rose like a meteor to social fame, got a monstrous end and retreated to divorce and poverty. He is splendid when he ingratiates himself into the good graces of the Prince Regent, admirable when he saves the reputation of a too impetuous young lady, enviable when he collects around him all the cream of English society to listen to his epigrams and examine his out of clothes, and pitiful when, toward the close, he becomes a parody of his past splendor.

We follow the hair career of the Beau with rapid interest, and regret the speed with which the picture comes to an end.

The supporting cast, which deserves high praise, consists of Mary Astor, Willard Louis, Irene Rich, Alan B. Francis, Carmel Myers, William Humphreys, Richard Tucker, Andre de Berger and others. The able direction is by Harry Beaumont.

"Girl Shy." Harold Lloyd's biggest and said to be his best comedy, will open on Monday for a four-day attraction.

Premature Old Age of Women.

It is no secret that so many women suffer from ailments peculiar to their sex. Dark circles appear under the eyes, a pale, drawn, haggard expression to the countenance, and the weakness which accompanies such ailments is evidenced by the lagging step, headaches, backache and nervous conditions. Every woman who is afflicted in this way should rely upon Lydia B. Timely Reminders From
The Pennsylvania State College

Prevent Fall Colds.—About this time of the year, fall colds appear in the poultry flock. Poultrymen should prevent them by guarding against draughts and over-crowding. If colds appear, try to locate the cause and remedy it. Treat each affected bird individually with a 10 per cent solution of argyrol.

Choosing the Storage Cellar.—A cellar with a dirt floor and without furnace, where the temperature may be held quite steadily just above freezing and where the air will be somewhat moist is a good place to keep Irish potatoes, cabbage, celery, and all root crops except sweet potatoes. If the main cellar is heated, one corner that has a window may be walled off with a double wooden wall and with regulation of temperature by means of the window, should serve the purpose very well.

Plant Bulbs Now.—Daffodils and tulips are very effective when planted in the foreground of shrubs or among perennials. Most of the varieties of daffodils, particularly Barri Conspicuous and Poiteus, persist from year to year. Bulbs can be secured from your local dealer and planted until the last of November. In even later, if the ground is mulched early to keep out the frost.

House the Pullets.—All pullets should now be housed in the laying houses. It is important that they be grouped according to their development. The different groups can be easily insured maximum growth and vitality, according to State College poultry specialists.

Watch for San Jose Scale.—San Jose scale is again appearing in individual orchards, especially in the western row of counties of the state. It is suspected your orchard now.

HUSBAND AND WIFE
PRAISE "DRECO"

Mr. Perkins Took Cathartics Every Night for 35 Years. Suffered Greatly from Indigestion, Cramps and Gas on the Stomach. Mrs. Perkins was Run-down and Weak.

Mr. Frank Perkins, a well-known photographer of Pontiac, Mich., is one of the latest to testify for Dreco. He says:

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Perkins.
"For 35 years I had to take a cathartic every night. I suffered so from constipation. Since starting on Dreco, though, I haven't taken a pill and my bowels are as regular as clockwork."

"Dreco also relieved me of indigestion, cramps and gas on the stomach and my breath is no longer disagreeable. I sleep better at night and am not nearly as nervous as I used to be."

"When my wife felt so weak and run-down here lately, she tried Dreco, too, and it did her a lot of good. She is now free of those attacks of indigestion and liver trouble, her nerves are greatly improved and her bowels are as regular and easy as anyone could wish."

By getting to the root of the trouble and aiding and strengthening the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels Dreco is quick to relieve the conditions that cause indigestion, constipation, rheumatism, headaches, nervousness, poor appetite, gas on the stomach, dizzy spells, hemorrhages, pains in the back and limbs and impure blood.

All good druggists sell Dreco and it is being specially introduced in this section by Connelville Drug Store, 104 N. Scottville by Hoffman's Drug Store. Advertisement.

DAVID LAWRENCE.

Right Again!

While David Lawrence was the only correspondent to predict with accuracy the result of close election in 1916, there were many writers who in 1920 and 1924 forecast as he did the Republican victory.

David Lawrence had the distinction this year however, of being the first to announce definitely that the election would not be thrown into the House, that LaFollette would not be a decisive factor in the West and that the third party would not get the electoral vote of more than one or two states.

On October 14, fully three weeks before election, David Lawrence, after completing personal investigation of the West disclosed the emptiness of the LaFollette claims and demonstrated that the election of Coolidge was inevitable.

On November 1, summing up the results of a 9 000 mile journey from coast to coast David Lawrence said President Coolidge would receive at least 333 votes and a possible 366. This was not guess-work but a reporter's feat in getting the facts from those who knew the situation in all the Northern and Western states.

Readers have confidence in David Lawrence's dispatches because he devotes himself every day to the task of interpreting national affairs, gathering his material first hand and without prejudice.

What You Should Know About Satin

Kinds, Qualities, Textures by Dozen—Manufacturers Use Trade Name.

You won't question the certainty of satin's place among the silks after one trip through the "yard goods" department. For there you are sure to see silks of lengths of the lustrous fabric draped profusely about, reserves a writer in the Kansas City Star.

Since you will find satins put out by different manufacturers almost every year under new names, however, and since you are sure to find different kinds, qualities and weights of satin by the dozen, from the extremely lightweight "crystal" satin to the heavy stiff-backed satin, the important thing to remember is not the mere names of the cloths, but certain general rules which will guide you in your selection.

Now, satin is always made in the characteristic satin weave—the fine silk warp passes over a group of the filling threads, any seven or more, and then under one, so that nearly all the warp is brought to the surface and nearly all the weft is left underneath. This manner of weaving is chiefly responsible for the high luster all satins have; the variation in gloss comes with the quality of the silk used, since the better the silk the higher the luster, and with the method of finishing and extent to which the goods is "calendered" or pressed between hot rollers. When first taken from loom, satins are somewhat lustrous and rough, but do not lose their gloss, which process removes the roughness and also increases the natural brilliancy.

You must remember, however, that the higher the gloss of the fabric, the more easily it will wear shabby. For this reason you should select the fine, high-glossed satin only for "dress" wear, then you will find that it gives quite satisfactory service. Hard, everyday wear will "rough up" the surface, and give the material a greasy shine. For hard wear you should select short-throw satin.

Look at the back of the satin you buy, too, when you consider its durability. A drop back gives a soft satin which is an excellent choice for covers of draped styles. But the plain-backed satin is stiffer and will wear much better. Cotton-backed satin is a "good buy" for a lining.

When satin first appeared in the trade it was called "serpentine"; the term slipped through Italian lips as "settil"; western tongues dropped the "t" and smoothed the name into our stiffer-sounding "satin." The material is known to have been in use in England as early as the fourteenth century, and in France and Spain probably earlier than that.

Rich Dinner Gown of Brown Chiffon Velvet

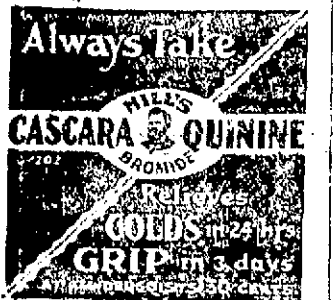

Showing a very attractive dinner gown of cocoa brown chiffon velvet, trimmed with squirrel fur dyed to match, and a beaded ornament on the hip.

For Stout Women

The stout woman's coat should not be extremely thick and heavy, though it may still be warm. Soft materials that will not increase the wearer's bulk are best. It is doubtful if the short, stout woman should ever wear a fur coat, unless the fur is extremely soft and pliable. Corded materials, or materials with a faint up-and-down stripe, should be becoming. Dark colors with, of course, black leading, are best for the stout woman's coat.

Camellia in Favor

The camellia remains in favor. If white, it ornaments dance frocks and afternoon gowns. If bright red it is likely to find a place on the shoulder of a tailored suit or dress.

Change of Shades in Late Headgear

Tricorn Brims and Higher Crowns Develop Interest in Millinery.

The same insistent spirit that brought an end to the solitary regime of the narrow, straight-outline also is responsible for the termination of cloche domination, says a fashion authority in the New York Herald Tribune. The reason most frequently advanced for the tenacious adherence to the small bell-shaped chapeau was the bobbed hair, which, according to ardent cloche enthusiasts, could not be attractively set off by any other type of hat.

The autumn season, despite many dire predictions for the future of the bob, has witnessed little if any diminution of the vogue for the short-clipped hair and yet new shapes have finally ended the reign of the personal cloche. Incidentally, the new directive types of chapeau harmonize quite as well with the bob as do the old. The cloche has been practically eliminated from the picture.

Among the new shapes the small, square-crowned directive hat is one of the leading factors. An unusually smart model from Caroline Reborel is developed in green felt and contrastingly trimmed with lapped black satin ribbons.

From Jeanne Lanvin come two charming small hats which exploit the round crown—the beret, and the helmet. The latter shape is more than normally high, and is distinguished by schilling-like trimmings which appear at the turn of the crown. The turban is another petite type that will be particularly smart this season when worn with winter furs and costumes. Molyneux is one of the principal sponsors of this shape, and his models show very little trimming and cover the ears in Cleopatra effect.

The tricorn is also a dominant autumn shape, and manifests itself particularly in Marquise and Napoleonic effects. Other important new models are the high toque, the classic portrait hat and the small sailor. Modified forms of the cloche are still in evidence.

Among the materials, velvet is gradually usurping the place held by felt in the early days of autumn. Black linters, plush, panne and suede are widely noted in the most recent importations. Ribbon is another important factor in millinery materials, and the narrow four-inch types of last season have been succeeded by ribbons which are six, eight, and occasionally ten inches wide. These are used for trimming as well as for the principal fabric of the hat. Metallic cloth, Chinese crepes and glazed leathers are the most popular of the novelty materials.

Hairnet Now Popular With Bobbed Hair Girl

Of late the net has become popular with bobbed heads—especially for keeping duffy curly locks neatly coiffed. But the effect desired was usually the invisible net. Now, says the Kansas City Star, the net is being featured as a decorative part of the head dress—as it has many times by European gentlewomen.

The Venetians, as old portraits reveal, understood the artistic charm of a handsome net that contrasted with the hair. Nets of gold and silver and banded across the forehead with jewels were most picturesque. At present, these fancy nets are being made in lattice patterns of baby ribbon velvet. One seen, worn over auburn locks, was of purple velvet. For golden hair nothing is more effective than black. And there are possibilities for many charming color schemes. To make the net most becoming it should harmonize with the hair or complexion. But still another idea is to match the costume with the same tone. Thus if beige is being worn, a brown hairnet will be attractive. For evening wear, narrow metal ribbons, studded with beads will make a handsome net. The finer the ribbon and the larger the lattice the more attractive, women's evening gowns, can be dressed. And after all, there is no reason why any head cannot wear one of these new nets.

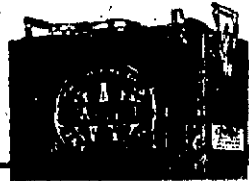

Give Touch to Frock
A collar and cuff set of peach-tinted linen is a distinctive addition to the coat frock of black satin. The linen set is, rightly, embroidered in black.

BRITAIN MAY HAVE COALITION CABINET

News dispatches from London indicate that no party will secure a working majority in the new Parliament, members of which will be elected October 28. Some experts believe the new Ministry will either be a predominantly disordered Tory Cabinet, headed by ex-Premier Stanley Baldwin, or the revival of a Coalition Ministry, such as carried Great Britain through the World War. In the event of a Coalition Government, ex-Premier David Lloyd George, Winston Spencer Churchill, Sir Robert Borden and Lord Birkenhead are expected to have prominent portfolios.

Furnace Ovens Again Change Course of Production, This Time Causing It to Recede

Bring Total Down to 84,970 Tons, First Drop Since Present Rise Began.

RUNNING TIME SCHEDULE

Reduced to Four Days but Merchants Run More of Their Plants Full Six Days; First Rise More Ovens, Fewer Than at One Time for Some Weeks.

Again, and for a second successive week, the furnace output ovens in the Connellsville region have upset expectations with respect to tonnage. There is, however, a very decided difference between the two weeks with respect to the effect the furnace output had upon the total.

During the week ended October 21 the gain of 10,000 tons at furnace ovens added to the 1,350 tons gained at merchant ovens advanced the combined production by 11,350 tons. Last week there was an almost complete reversal of the order. Instead of continuing to increase their output the furnace ovens curtailed by 11,000 tons, or 3,500 tons more than they had added to the week before. At the same time the merchants expanded their production by 2,530 tons, making the net result a loss for the week of 11,470 tons, or within 360 tons of wiping out the combined gain of the week before.

As in the previous week the increase in production did not come in response to larger demand for coke from the general consuming trade, so last week's decrease does not mean that there has been so pronounced a slump that a large reduction becomes necessary in order to avoid the dangers of over-production. In both instances the changes merely reflected the state of the requirements of the coke consuming subsidiaries of the United States Steel Corporation. The start in furnace production toward the close of October apparently more than supplied the needs, hence the slowing up that took place at the ovens last week. This was affected by cutting down the running time to four days at the majority of the plants, not by blowing out any ovens.

The merchant producers made the smallest addition, 28 ovens, to their active oven list for more than a month past. It included the firing up of 12 ovens at a long idle plant and the addition of 28 at a going operation. At the same time there were more plants making full time than during the preceding week. This more than the small increase in ovens was instrumental in augmenting production to a total of 60,970 tons, the largest merchant contribution to the weekly output since the week ended April 19 and a gain of almost 100 per cent over the low of 26 in the week of August 3.

The falling of in furnace production, bringing the combined tonnage down to 84,970 tons, was the first recession in the most recent upward movement which, until last week, had progressed steadily and at about the same rate as the decline beginning in May, 1923, and which had continued with only occasional and brief interruptions until twelve weeks ago.

The estimated production of coke during the week ended Saturday, November 1, was 84,970 tons, divided between the two districts as follows: Connellsville, 28,770, a decrease of 13,570 tons; Lower Connellsville, 56,200, an increase of 2,100 tons, or a net decrease of 11,470 tons, as compared with a total gain of 11,350 tons during the preceding week.

By last week the production was: furnace, 51,900, a loss of 14,000 tons; merchant, 60,970, a gain of 2,530 tons, a comparison with gains of 10,500 and 1,350 tons respectively during the week ended October 21.

The addition to the active oven list was but 35 ovens, including 12 at Trace and 25 at Oliver No. 1, both merchant operations. Production by the merchant and furnace ovens and the total compared with the corresponding week in 1923 is shown herewith:

Week October 18 A Record Breaker In Car Loading

The American railroads have successfully completed the greatest movement of freight traffic in a single week in their history.

"This record-breaking week ending October 18," says Robert S. Blaker, vice chairman, Committee on Public Relations of Eastern Railroads, "presents an amazing situation—over 1,100,000 cars loaded with revenue freight, an unused surplus of 100,000 serviceable cars, and a motive power reserve of 5,100 serviceable locomotives—these results with fewer cars and practically no more locomotives than were in service five years ago.

"Yet in 1920, loadings of a million cars a week were accompanied by car shortages as high as 117,000 cars, and there was practically no reserve of serviceable locomotives against contingencies.

"The difference between these two situations may well summarize the progress made in improving railroad transportation in this country since 1920.

"Today the railroads can move ten per cent more freight in a single week than they could five years ago and yet not begin to touch the maximum of their capacity.

"Freight rates have been reduced more than $700,000,000 a year, and yet railroad earnings—which were practically nothing in 1920—show signs of encouraging improvement.

"Out of the earnings of 1924 not a penny will be paid to railroad stockholders and bondholders while the railroads of this vicinity did not first create out of efficient and economical operation.

"The operation of great railroads is the most dynamic enterprise in modern life. On every division of every railroad there are limiting factors which determine the maximum load which can be moved by a single train. Railroad is a ceaseless battle to push these limiting factors upward. The ammunition of this battle is new capital investment—not alone in new cars and locomotives, but in the lengthening of divisions, the construction of short cuts, the flattening of curves, the reduction of grades, and a thousand other things which seldom come to public notice."

How quickly that rash disappeared!

THOUSANDS of users have wondered at the quickness of the action of Resinol Ointment and Soap. The answer is that it is not a surface treatment, but one that reaches the depths of the pores and attacks the source of the disorder, starting the healing right.

The first touch relieves the itching, burning and soreness and a few days' persistent use rarely fails to clear away the trouble.

When the skin is once restored to its normal condition the daily use of Resinol Soap is generally sufficient to keep it healthy ideal for the complexion—unsurpassed for the bath and shampoo. Ask your druggist what he knows about the Resinol products.

Nearly 100 Automobiles to Carry Rooters to Monessen Tomorrow; Leave at 12:30

Owners of Machines Responding to Call for Aid; 100 Are Offered.

CARS TO BE DECORATED

The success of the Connellsville-Monessen caravan tomorrow is practically assured and for the first time in years the community spirit of the city will flare up and display itself in a manner never before seen by residents here. Citizens are donating the use of their automobiles to have a big cheering squad to the steel town to encourage the High School football team and with 100 machines already listed as certain of making the trip 30 more are anticipated between now and tomorrow noon.

The cars will be under the complete control of J. W. McLaren, chairman of the committee and experienced in the handling of long strings of automobiles. The only rules to apply will be that no one leave the line of cars and speed ahead of the leader.

Every machine will be marked, front and rear with a banner reading "C. H. S. Caravan, Connellsville to Monessen." The affair will serve a several fold purpose. It will be an outing for many students who otherwise could not have made the trip. It will divert the Connellsville team and it will teach the younger element a lesson in community spirit.

There are approximately 35 teachers making the trip and the youngsters will be safe under their supervision. One side of the field has been reserved for Connellsville and a big cheering duel is certain to feature the game.

It is expected that by noon today, when the ticket sale will close, there will have been 500 admissions purchased.

Stores today were experiencing a "run" on ribbons of orange and black color. Practically every car in the procession will be decorated, as well as the rooters themselves.

Never before in the history of Connellsville has so large a delegation gone elsewhere to boost the Cokers and frequently crowds of less size have been seen at Fayette field. With such community spirit taking hold, especially to back a team that has not won a game this season, it cannot be imagined what a hand the Cokers would receive if they should develop a winning streak.

One thing is assured. On Thanksgiving afternoon the biggest crowd in the history of the city will likely be on hand to see the Turkey Day clash between the Cokers and Dunbar Township High School. Practically the whole township population will be here and Orange and Black supporters are not going to be outdone in numbers of rooting.

TORNADOES HAVE STIFF WORKOUTS FOR COMING GAME

The revamped Connellsville Tornadoes are practicing diligently to prepare for the Armistice Day game to be played November 11 at Uniontown against the Independents of that place. Although the locals have been playing individually on various other teams, they have been together only once this season—that time, as the Connellsville Independents in the game against Fayette City.

The Tornado team which will go to Uniontown next Tuesday will be composed entirely of Connellsville athletes. It will be a representative Coker organization which trots on the Elks Field at the county seat.

Pitt Is All Set For Game Against Geneva Tomorrow

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 7.—University of Pittsburgh's next football opponent is Geneva College, the Covenanters playing here Saturday, November 8 the kickoff being at 2:30. Geneva is coached by "Jack" Sack, one of the greatest guards the Panthers ever had, and is expected to furnish some pretty stiff opposition for Captain Lee Frank's team. It just happens that Sack and Coach Sutherland are rated as the two best guards who played under "Pop" Warner while at Pitt and this gives the game added interest. Geneva is one of the strongest secondary teams of the Tri-State District and always fights hard against Pitt. That school has supported a football team for 25 years and two score years ago the annual battles between Geneva and Pitt, (then W. U. P.) were looked on as classics.

Coach Sutherland will probably make no change in the line-up he used against Syracuse and which held the Orange to a 7-7 score with the exception that Jess Brown is pretty sure to be in the backfield. Brown was one of the heroes of the Syracuse game, his last quarter long run making a tie score possible. He is also an exceptional kicker and with him back of the line it will not be necessary to call on Mark Johnson, but the center position to boot the ball. Just what combination Sutherland will work out in his backfield for the three remaining games is hard to figure now. He started the Syracuse game with Ashbaugh at quarter, Schmitt and Harding at halves and Gustafson at fullback. With Brown to be taken care of the "Big Scot" will have to shift the man around a lot in order to get a combination that will function properly.

After the Geneva game comes the annual battle with W. & J. to be played November 16 at Forbes Field. If tickets were available for the game it is likely a crowd of 75,000 would attend. All Pitt alumni and students are restricted to two tickets each, but the demand is just about double the supply. The public sale of tickets will be for general admission only, and each person will be limited to two tickets.

Work on Pitt's new stadium, which will have a seating capacity of 70,000, is progressing rapidly, the grading having been about completed and the foundation work being well under way. The contract for the steel work will be let in the near future and this will be completed during the winter. When the weather breaks in the spring the concrete work will be started, and the stadium will be ready for use by September 1 or earlier. It will be one of the finest structures of its kind in the world and will provide facilities for football, baseball, basketball, track and other sports. It will cost about $2,000,000. Pitt authorities also plan to make it available as a civic center for public gatherings, pageants, etc.

Dunbar Township Plays Last Home Game at 3 Today

The Dunbar Township High School football team will play North Union High at Trotter field this afternoon 3:15. It will be the last home game of the season. Quite a big crowd is anticipated.

The contest had originally been scheduled for Saturday, November 9, but as the North Union outfit, wanted to "risk" other games on Saturday, the neighboring school consented to the Friday afternoon clash.

S. CONNELLSVILLE GRIDDEYS PLAY AT HOME ON SATURDAY

The South Connellsville Independents will play at home tomorrow afternoon, meeting the Everson Athletics at May's Field. The game will be at 2 o'clock. The visiting team will be composed of former High School players and a few from the Company E, Mount Pleasant team.

The Independents won a game for Armistice Day, November 11. Perryopolis has been scheduled for that afternoon but was cancelled. On Saturday, November 15, the Independents clash with the Milltown A. O. U. of Irwin, a team that has lost only one game out of seven played.

the college stands absolutely free of any debt. This has been made possible by a drive to make up the deficit which existed last commencement and by careful and efficient management both engineered by Dr. Cloyd Goodright, president of the college.

The first time the college stood free of any debt was in 1915 for a few months as the close of a drive to increase the endowment. Bethany was able to operate on its income.

Gridiron Glummas.
The Coker griddeys have put in a strenuous week getting ready for Monessen. The only casualty from last week was "Bob" Hillard, with a sprained ankle. It is coming along all right. This has been a season of hard luck for the Hulsakin Township lad, who had blood poisoning before school opened. He can deliver the goods, however, and next fall will probably see him tipping things up.

Indev John, the colored end, who has been out several weeks with a bad wrist, is still a casual. Whether he will be ready for Thanksgiving is a matter of conjecture.

John Long has been doing good work at center since he got into the line-up. Next year will find Enos and Solomon tussling for that very important pivot job.

The Cokers play South Brownsville next Tuesday afternoon at Fayette field. Originally scheduled as a contest to give the reserves a chance, the visitors have developed into a mean team.

Connellsville griddeys cannot treat the Dunbar Township clash too lightly. The visitors will be a real threat. They will not be beaten before going on the field this year, just because it is Connellsville they are playing.

"Do you play football on this field?" asked a Helen College griddey recently, when that team stopped here one afternoon for a practice session before going on to Duquesne. "Sure,"

Running Races in 1925

The historic North Randall race track, which for 19 years has been the home of Grand Circuit harness horse racing, will be the scene of running horse races as well as trotters and pacers next summer if present plans go through.

It is planned to conduct two or three running meets, next summer, Win Kinnin, president, said, but they will not interfere with the Grand Circuit races. Under the plans the first will be held in June, for seven days.

Robins Sign Kid Hurler

The Brooklyn National League baseball club already is preparing to bolster up its pitching staff. It Robins announce the signing of right-handed old E. T. Williams, who pitched this year for the Jackson (Miss.) club. He bats and throws left handed, is 5 feet 11 inches tall, weighs 160 pounds, and has a 40 mph. fastball. He won 11 games and lost 7 for a percentage of 38.9. He tossed 20 bases on balls and fanned 13 batters.

Sport Notes

An Illinois golf association is being formed with 500 members.

Columbus, Ohio, has been unable to win an American association pennant since 1907.

California has scheduled a football game with Pennsylvania at Berkeley for New Year's day.

John (Buddy) Ryan has been made manager of the Sacramento team. He succeeded Charley.

J. E. Mers of Fondulac, Ind., was elected captain of Purdue university's cross country team.

Cincinnati's baseball club at 1905 was considered the first colored club in the history of baseball.

New York Giants have won 11 pennants since John McGraw was manager in 1907.

He chartered two sniffling boats from a Greek fisherman and in an hour the beach had broadened, the cliff had risen to almost impossible heights, while they were still well off the shore they shot into its shadow. The boatman chose a landing at the foot of the cliff road, a quarter of a mile away from the steep path by which Andrea had made her descent. As the safari began to form on the beach, Trevor turned to Andrea. "We're going to your old hotel, you know. It's really the only one. If you prefer, I can send for a motor-car for you and myself, but we'd have to wait half an hour."

Andrea caught her breath as she realized that it was only minutes before she would be in collision with a world. Her eyes ran down the line of their marching column already on the edge of an inconspicuous setting, but still impressing with that subtle dignity which the free and half-naked black takes with him everywhere and which is born of his absolute indifference to standards not his own.

"Let us go down at the head of our men," she answered.

"You are right," said Trevor, pleased at her shrewd judgment. "We mortals," he added, "don't always recognize the importance of fighting an atmosphere with an atmosphere. To go in as cock of our own walk is a thousand times better than a motor-car and the back door."

Andrea nodded. "I felt it but I could not put it in words like that."

As Trevor, the white head of a quarter-mile-long and glistening black serpent of humanity, swung in between the antipodes of the hotel's imposing portals, the ever-opportunistic Magnette stretched his arm, raised his barrel-head and barked. Above that rancorous cry sounded the spontaneous and uncontrollable peal of Andrea's silver laughter.

The groups of men and women—all but one—on the hotel veranda stopped in their various occupations as though paralyzed; drinks paused halfway to their lips, cigarettes burned unconsciously, fingers and needles poised instantaneously—all but one pair. The manipulator of the exception was a dear but very proper old lady wearing a cap of flimsy lace on her plentiful white hair and enough flimsy lace on her person to make the porch chair, in which she sat, look like a stall at a Red Cross bazaar. She was knitting a vast khaki-colored sweater and at the sound of Andrea's laughter she gave no sign beyond pursing her withered lips while she methodically finished off the stitch upon which she had been engaged.

That done, she raised a pair of twinkling black eyes so wonderfully alive that it seemed impossible they belonged to her wrinkled face and dashed one look at Andrea and one at Trevor. "Well, my dear," she said calmly, presumably to the former, "it's a relief to have you back apparently alive and well."

No sooner were the words out of her mouth than she was swept into Andrea's impetuous embrace. "Oh, Aunty Owen! Oh, you old dear!"

The lady defended herself with considerable energy and was heard to grumble that even kissing had degenerated into a rough pastime. Having recovered herself from Andrea's arms, she said, "Now that that is over you will please go to your room and change from that outlandish dress costume; you'll find everything as you left it except for a new lock on the door."

Andrea glanced at Trevor and leaned over to whisper imploringly in her aunt's ear.

"Your husband?" ejaculated the old lady dully. "Well, that's a relief, too; but I prefer to meet him elsewhere and after you have presented documentary evidence. By the way," she added with ominous emphasis as she resumed her knitting, "Harry is still here."

"I should say I am," exclaimed a youth in the trim uniform of the Flying Corps, as he stepped out from the hotel door. "Hello, Sister Andy. Then his eyes fell on Trevor. A slow smile of happy welcome spread over his face. "Well, I'll be d—!" he exclaimed fervently. "D'you know, Trevor, I've been saying from the first. Cherchez the flying-machine! Come in and let me watch you have a drink."

Trevor, quivering under the pressure of the control he had summoned to carry him through the trying moment and filled with an immediate love and admiration for Aunty Owen, paused to direct his following to a nearby vacant lot.

"Is that marriage tip straight?" asked Harry.

"Straight is the good bishop of Moan and two other missionary journals could make it," replied Trevor.

Harry was thoughtful for a moment, then he said, "Well, Trevor, I don't know how you're fixed for proof but you know that through long years and fat, I'm for you from the break in bulk. As one sportsman to another, I congratulate you on putting one over on that up-country animated leather-sack of vitriol wine. By the way, you realize I've got to wire him."

"Of course," said Trevor. "The sooner the better. Don't worry about Andrea's mood and rancor," he added, frowning. "The truth is, I'm pretty well heated with the needful."

"You Americans generally are," said Harry, smiling. "Mort of jolly national tradition."

Twenty-four hours later the diamond constable, personally furnished as to face and heavy of punch made his impressive arrival.

When he had washed and otherwise attempted to freshen his porcupine beard he sent out a call for a family conference. It took place in the Trevor's sitting room. Harry was there representative of the house of Peller vor and his bride. The sole male representative of the house of Peller opened the proceedings with the following speech: "Hammar," he said, "as the part of my sister I wish to offer you an unqualified apology. It seems that she was—or suddenly carried away by an impulse in conjunction with a flying machine, but you will be glad to know that Trevor here has—er—has played the man all through and you are permanently relieved from any further responsibility in the matter. I don't think there's another bully thing to say beyond repeating the apology due you from my entire family."

"Not a thing to say, you young scoundrel of a whipper-snapper!" thundered the red-faced magnate. "Do you think I came down here to listen to your maiden speech, accept a dirty apology and get out with my tail between my legs? Well, I didn't. I came down here to show this interloping vagabond of a scavenger where he and his wife—don't get off."

A gleam crept into Trevor's eyes, the same gleam that had shone there when he had shot MacCoster, but it turned into his slow, assuring smile as his gaze met that of Andrea and took note of her alarm. He remembered that only ten minutes before he had promised on the honor of a lover to be seen only and not heard.

"Aren't you a bit late for that?" asked Harry, unperturbed. "They seem to be running before the wind already and with a fair lead." He lit a cigarette and snapped the dead match through the open doorway.

"You think so, do you?" said the magnate, his eyes snapping malignantly. "You've probably never heard of the shipping ring, but I'll tell you this: the line that takes these two—two two bathtub-collars—as passengers is ruined. They'll stay in Africa till they rot."

Andrea stifled a yawn. "Robert," she said to her coolest and best society voice, "if Sir Hammar is going to force us to wait here for one of your own steamers to put in—I think you'd better collect that thousand pounds reward."

It was the end. The magnate gasped, sprang up and fled, pursued by a smoke arrow propelled from Harry's rounded mouth. Aunt Owen pursed her lips but kept on knitting; she could not, however, altogether hide the laugh that was in her snarling eye. Andrea dropped on her knees beside her.

That night when all the hotel was in darkness and silence reigned Andrea and Trevor stood together by the coping at the edge of the cliff and looked across the moonlit bay to the far-away line of the sea. Behind them was the dark, massed shadow of the Bognaville trolleys; at their feet and before them stretched an open world, bathed in kindly and opalescent light.

Andrea's eyes started at the top of the zigzag path and followed it deliberately down the cliff-side until they reached and swept the gleaming crescent of the beach; then they rose and stared at the placid moon. Nine weeks, no more, had passed since last this scene had held her, yet into them was packed the germ of all her life almost to the explosion of preceding memories. She felt a swelling within her of all the major emotions and frightened, turned from them to hide her face against Trevor's shoulder. Her arms slipped up around his neck and clung to him.

"Oh, White Man," she whispered, "my wonder man, plunderer of my heart, if dared to give it any measure, how far you have led me along the shining road!"

POULTRY

ROASTING CHICKENS FINISHED ON MILK

Much of the poultry sent to the consuming public is in an unimproved condition. Feeding or fattening puts weight onto the birds, improves the flavor, causes the muscles to become tender and the bones brittle. Therefore the fat is distributed between the muscle fibers in a way similar to the marbling in roasts and steaks. In the roasting method of cooking poultry, the fat is used in shortening the time of cooking. This may be contrasted with the lean bird which requires longer cooking and from which the water evaporates, leaving the bird in a dry and tough condition.

Most milk feeding of roasting chickens by the producer is done in the fall when the weather is cool and the birds can better stand confinement. The time just preceding Thanksgiving and Christmas is most desirable. Young birds weighing from 3½ to 4½ pounds are about the right weight for fall feeding. Broiler feeding is done in the spring when the birds weigh about one-half pound less than the market demand, which is normally two pounds.

Two common methods of feeding are pen and crate fattening. For farm purposes pen fattening will be satisfactory because no special equipment is needed. The birds are confined to a limited coop area where they will get little or no exercise. The lack of exercise helps to make the bird tender.

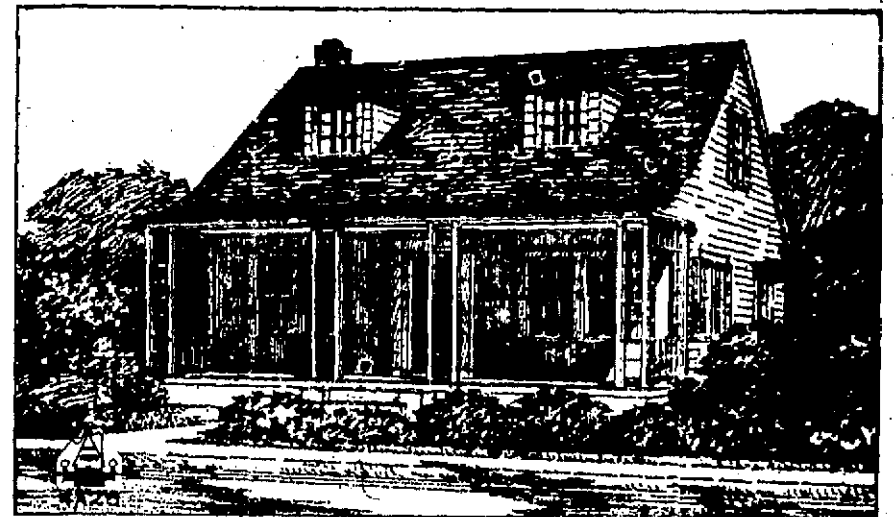

Purdue University has found the following ration and method of feeding quite satisfactory:

Two pounds ground corn
One pound ground whole oats
One pound four middlings
Eight pounds liquid buttermilk.
This is mixed at the feeding prior to the one it is to be fed. When fed, it should pour and be of a thick cream or panache-better consistency.

The birds should receive no feed for 24 hours previous to their first milk feeding. This is done in order to free the intestines from feed and to get the birds hungry. Thereafter they should be fed in troughs twice a day, early in the morning and late in the afternoon. From 10 to 14 days is the usual length of time for feeding. For the first three or four days until they are "on feed," the feed should be in front of them for only 10 minutes; for the next three or four days, 15 minutes; and for the last days, 20 minutes. The birds should be hungry at each feeding. If they are not hungry at each feeding, that feeding should be withheld.

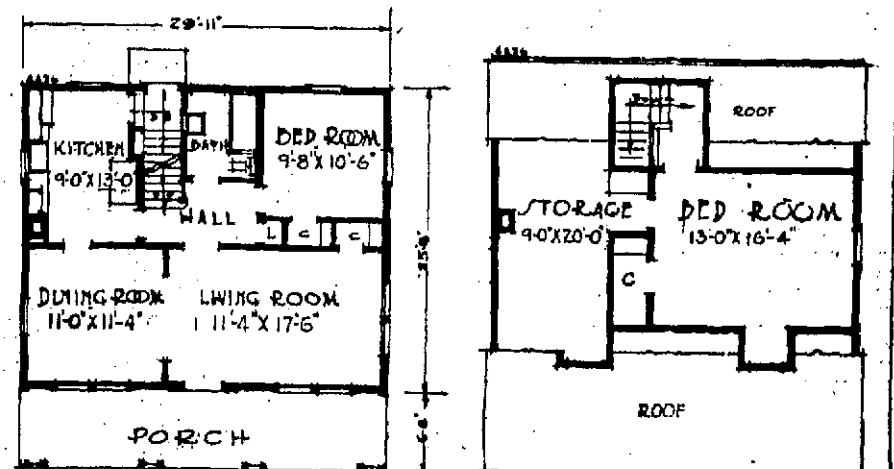

Only in very hot weather should anything other than the two regular feedings be given. At such a time the birds may have a very thin mixture of the ration given at noon, L. B. Schwartz, Purdue University.

A FOUR ROOM DUTCH COLONIAL BUNGALOW

Copyright, 1924—Architects' Small House Service Bureau.

Plan No. 2435.

A DECIDED advantage of the plan for this Dutch Colonial bungalow is the four rooms and bath on the first floor. The second story can be finished at any time. It offers another comfortable bedroom and large storage space.

If you desire a big shaded porch, extending across the entire front of the house, this design should please you. The porch is included under the main roof and the square cut columns give it a useful aspect.

Shingles or Suetco Exterior

The house is frame construction, siding exterior, cement base course, shingle roof and exterior stucco well under the porch. Exterior finish can be shingles or stucco, if desired.

There is a complete basement and well lighted laundry, furnace and storage rooms.

A large closet in the living room can serve as a coat closet, or can be converted into a day-bed closet—thus increasing sleeping accommodations. This bungalow has many admirable features for those who want to build a large small home at modest cost. It can be accommodated on a 30-foot lot.

The Cost To Build This House

The cost to build this house, including heating, plumbing, lighting, painting, ready to live in but not including wall decorations, should range between $5,000 and $6,000. In certain localities, where costs are high, the highest figure quoted would be too low. In other localities, the lowest figure quoted would be more than sufficient. The range of $1,000 is given to cover differences in the way the house is built and how thoroughly it is equipped and completed.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The plans for small homes are furnished by the National Bureau of the Architects' Small House Service Bureau of the United States, Inc., an organization made up of the representative practicing architects from leading architectural offices throughout the United States. The Bureau is controlled by the American Institute of Architects, and has the endorsement of the Department of Commerce, United States Government. It is practically a national making public service, and has as its purpose the furnishing of a very complete and dependable small house plan service at modest cost. For information regarding the blue plans and specifications, address the National Bureau of the Architects, 1700 Broadway, New York City. The United States Government is in no way connected with the service.

BIRD GUIDES MEN TO BEES' STORE

Chatter Until It Is Followed and Then Feeds Upon Larvae of Bees.

New York.—One of the strangest characters of the bird world is the common African honey-guide, first brought to the attention of the western world before 1700 by Father Jerome Isidore, a missionary to Abyssinia.

An object of almost superstitious reverence by the natives, this strange bird performs a useful service in conducting men to some beehive it has previously located. How it came to know that men could help it get the food it craves is still a matter for conjecture, but it is thought that the honey-guides often feast upon the bee larvae, which, according to others, it probably craves more than the honey itself.

Both the male and female bird have been observed to act as guides, but the female, in addition, has the questionable habit of inspiring her mate in the case of other birds and thus avoiding the responsibilities of motherhood. Although resembling the American "cowbird" in this practice, the honey-guide is a near relative not of the "cowbird" but of the woodpecker. Nevertheless, it rarely, if ever, climbs about the trunks of trees, preferring to perch on twigs and boughs. As in the case of woodpeckers, only two toes of each foot are directed forward, two being pointed to the rear.

Curious Tails of Characteristics.
James P. Chapin, associate curator of birds of the Eastern Hemisphere at the American Museum of Natural History, who has observed the bird in numerous expeditions while conducting expeditions in the Congo, writes of its characteristics in the museum's publication, Natural History.

"Were a facetious journalist," Mr. Chapin says, "to attempt to endow a mythical bird with some startling but imaginary instinct, he would hardly be likely to go to the length to which nature has gone in the case of the honey-guide. The strange behavior of this bird has so long been known, moreover, that it surprises one to learn how little has been written about it beyond simple accounts of the way the bird attracts the attention of men and reveals to them the location of beehives."

"Avoiding the heavy forests of the Congo basin and other parts of western Africa, the honey-guide ranges from Cape Colony to northeast Africa, and then across the Sudan to Senegal. It is a plain-colored, brownish gray bird, scarcely larger than our American bluebird, but much more stockily built, with short dense plumage and a skin so tough that it has often been considered a curium against the stings of bees."

"When fully grown, both sexes have half-crowned, apicalities of yellow; and the male bird is then distinguished by a large black throat patch. The immature birds are somewhat greener and until a few years ago were regarded as a distinct species. The nearest relatives of the honey-guides in our North American fauna are the woodpeckers; yet the honey-guides have neither stiffened tail feathers nor an assertive tongue."

Bird Protected by Natives.
"How well the honey guide is known and esteemed by the natives of the countries where it dwells may easily be imagined. By the Asande tribe of the northeastern Congo the bird is called 'turubura' and I was told that before the arrival of Europeans an Asande chief would have cut off the ears of any man so stupid as to have killed a honey-guide."

"Herbert Lang and I had many experiences with honey-guides attracted to our caravans or hunting parties. It is the habit of the bird to locate one or more bee colonies and then wait for the passing of men whose attention it attracts by persistent chattering. At such times it is relatively tame and will alight in small trees only a few yards off. If a man wishes to leave where the hive is, he follows the bird whistling occasionally to it."

"Here I may quote an instance from my own notes. One afternoon in November, 1911, in a small wooded swamp near Faidje, a post in the northeastern corner of the Congo, we came upon a male bird, who at once started his chatter, and then flew off to some distance, returning shortly as though to assure himself that we were in earnest. We replied with low whistles, and following him through the tall grass and scrub, were led on into higher ground where a few feathered guides would fly natively ahead about fifty yards until out of sight, perching on top of a bush and repeating the performance as soon as we came up."

"Presently another male bird joined him. We had gone about six hundred yards when both birds stepped in a low tree to alight. Then, by their short, staccato flights and repeated returns to the tree, the honey-guides impressed upon us that this was the spot. The buzzing of passing bees now was heard and the insects were traced to a small hole in the ground close by. During these proceedings the birds allowed us to approach within ten or fifteen feet of them."

"We prepared to make a fire, and the birds retired noiselessly for the time. A little later I saw them again alighting with puffed out breasts and open bills, uttering their low chirps which I had not heard before. They seemed to be quarrelling and one soon chased his rival off at top speed."

Helpers Stung by Bees.
"With the aid of some burning grass two of my black helpers quickly laid the hive unearthing the penalty of only six shillings. The comb contained no honey, only pollen and bee larvae. It was in a cavity previously occupied by termites."

off with it. Without waiting the bird with utter forthright intelligence, I do not hesitate to say that it was for this reason that they had worked."

"It is said that where the negroes have artificial hives hanging in trees for the use of bees, the honey-guides make no distinction and will lead to complete hives established through man's agency as readily as to natural cavities housing wild-bee colonies. This I believe, though I have not had occasion to verify it even among the negroes of the eastern Uelle district, who attach bees with hives made of mud."

"The assertion has also been made that the honey-guide will sometimes lead a man up to a snake or a leopard, but this has been vigorously denied by experienced naturalists."

"A story far better founded is that of the honey-guides following the honey-guides. Major Stevenson Hamilton describes it as though he had often observed it himself."

"You may be resting in the bush in the cool of the afternoon or on some cloudy day, when your attention is attracted by the persistent and approaching chatter of one of these feathered spies. Presently the bird itself comes strutting into a branch some forty yards distant, where it perches, flapping its wings and displaying every sign of impatience."

Followed by Small Animal.
"For a moment it is silent, and then a low familiar sound strikes the ear—slight sibilant hissing and chuckling, which at first you find yourself unable to identify. The honey-guides understand, and having with unobtrusive flight sought another tree some thirty yards further on, renews his invitation. Keeping quite still and looking steadily you presently spy a little gray and black form moving along at a steady trot; the tail is carried slightly above the level of the back, and the head, except when raised to glance up at the guide is held a little low."

"Every time the bird utters his monotonous refrain, which when translated into feathered language means, 'Come along, come along, don't be slow,' the follower replies, 'All right, my friend, don't be alarmed, I am coming.' And thus the strange procession passes on out of sight to the hollow log where the unlucky insects are industriously slaving only ultimately to satisfy the appetites of bird and beast."

The favorite food of this bird is honey, and it has powerful claws with which to tear open the hive. From his observations Mr. Chapin has come to believe that the guiding is instinctive, for it has become hereditary with at least one species of the bird and is practiced by old birds of both sexes and apparently by immature birds as well."

"The fact that it is a characteristic form of behavior throughout the whole range of the species," he says, "argues for its remote origin and leads us to believe that the instinct grew up slowly with the evolution of the family, though man is not always the beneficiary. The honey-guides must have preyed on bees long before man reached Africa, and we may speculate quite properly as to the origin of the guiding instinct."

Workers Shift Los Angeles
Giant Date Palm Tree
Los Angeles.—One of the landmarks of the old Los Angeles—the plant date palm tree from which Date Valley was named—has been moved into private grounds.

The history of the tree goes back to 1795, when Cornelio Aguirre, who spent by the padre of the California missions to Mission, Mexico, to obtain fruit trees for planting in California. As a seedling, the tree was planted in Date street and grew there.

Officials of the company which moved the tree estimated it weighed 10,000 pounds. It is more than eighty feet high and two derricks were necessary in the operation of lifting it out of the excavation and placing it in the earth-filled box in which it was moved. The cost was approximately $1,500.

Romance Is on Wane
in South Sea Islands
Papeete, Tahiti.—Motion pictures and radio, jazz music, motorcars and bobbed hair have crowded out the old native customs of Tahiti, and some of the romance of the South seas would appear to be on the wane.

Time was when July 14 the anniversary of the fall of the Bastille was the great native festival of these islands. There was singing and dancing contests among the native clans prepared for months in advance, and the competition for real excellence was keen. This year only a few months and mediocre companies entered the contests, and interest was lacking. The principal centers of attraction were the dancing pavilions along the waterfront where jazz bands led the revelers in fox trots to a continuous flow of warm champagne.

Once Malevolent, Now
Made to Serve Mankind
Some of the most useful of the gifts of science were first revealed to mankind in a malevolent rather than a benevolent aspect. Poison, for example, was first employed for the extermination of man.

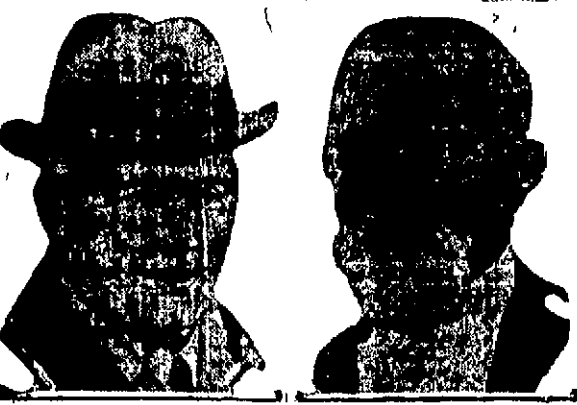

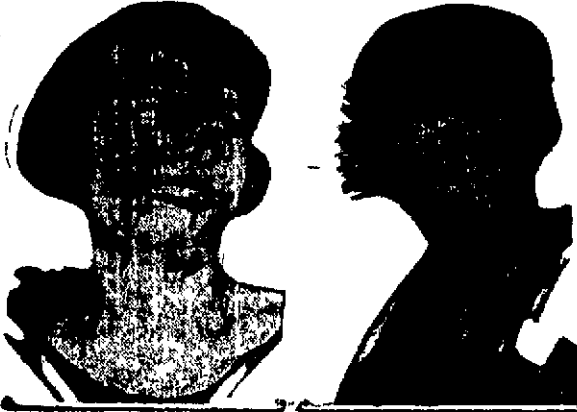

But even the most destructive agencies may in the course of time be brought into the constructive service of the human race.

Steel man's most useful metal made its appearance in the form of arsenic and arsenic was first revealed to mankind in a malevolent rather than a benevolent aspect. Poison, for example, was first employed for the extermination of man.

STANLEY BALDWIN SWEEP BACK INTO POWER.

As a result of the reversal of the British general elections, the Tories have captured a clear majority in the House of Commons, completely overthrowing the Labor government of Ramsay MacDonald and insuring that the King will call upon Sir Stanley Baldwin to return to No. 10 Downing street as Great Britain's Conservative Premier. According to British political experts there are indications that the Conservatives cannot be overthrown for five years the usual life of a Parliament. Labor, however, remains as the chief opposition party.

Straight, Tubular Outline in Favor

Mode Featured Principally in Tailored Dresses and Ensembles.

Two silhouettes dominate the afternoon and semi-formal dresses for the season, according to a fashion authority in the New York Herald-Tribune. The straight, tubular outline, so generally affected last season, is still popular and is featured principally in tailored dresses and ensembles. The new silhouette type is distinguished by a flare which occurs usually at the lower sector of the skirt. This flare effect is achieved by means of tucks, inserted gores and plaits, and it is seen in every genre of frock except the strictly tailored dress. The most advanced silhouette of the season has a molded or semi-molded bodice, capacious flared lines over the hips, and flares moderately at the hemline. It is decidedly shorter than last season and averages from thirteen to fifteen inches off the ground.

No one type of waistline stands out definitely this fall. The line may be high, directive, low, normal or absent. There is a decided tendency toward the marked waistline, and a return to a normal perceptible line by next spring is generally predicted.

The long sleeve is a definite and essential factor in afternoon dresses. The plain, unadorned variety is the most frequent note, but there are numerous other diversifications which are also on vogue. Prominent among these are the medieval gauntlet type, the bishop sleeve, the Elizabethan puffed ruffle that covers the hand, and the shaped sleeve. The cuff is often made in an opposing color or of a contrasting material. In general the long, slender effect is invariably decreased in street and afternoon dresses for fall and winter.

The typical fall neckline is decidedly high. This effect is achieved through high collars, which may be attached or separate, through the scarf, and by means of the jacket. The directive collar is a frequent and popular note. A very effective innovation is the soft, high collar, which is turned down over a small, trim tie.

The tunic is of paramount importance this season. It is employed by practically every Paris designer, and it plays a significant part in the inauguration of the more involved silhouette. The tunic may be an integral part of the dress or it may appear as a separate tunic-blouse. Tunics are straight, bias or slashed and they are most generally used for afternoons and street ensembles, costume, where coat and tunic are of identical length.

Daytime dresses show a distinct tendency toward ribbed materials, so-called to distinguish them from flat-surfaced fabrics. Bengaline, ottoman and faille are the leading materials of this type. Crepe satin, kasha, rayon, tulle, fulgurant, silk velvets and artificial silk velvets are also important materials. For dresses which accompany the ensemble, broadened and metallic fabrics are an important note. Colorful hues are gradually superseding black and white, although the latter combination is still a most prevalent factor for street and afternoon frocks. Among the new hues, the brown range, from rust to beige, is the most popular color note. Navy blue, bottle green and red are also prominent. Turtin and Scotch plaids are even in profusion, especially in sports clothes.

Afternoon Coats.

The coat silhouette is undergoing a gradual reconstruction, with the result that there are two general outlines offered for autumn—the perennial straight-line and the recent fuller effect. The coat flare begins at a higher line than the dress and is slightly more pronounced. Gores and plaits are employed to achieve this intended effect, which usually occurs about the knees. The trend in winter coats is toward the new and fuller silhouette, but both outlines are still available in regalia for fall and winter. A frequent characteristic of the flaring type is a slightly fitted effect at the waistline. Many coats are double breasted, so that the upper part may fold back, while the under front, of a different fabric, is held across the figure—the famous double coat effect which has attracted such wide attention this season.

Wide gauntlet cuffs of fur are the most effective of an unusually varied collection of sleeves which appear on the new fall and winter coats. There are no decided diets on coat sleeves, which may be narrow, puffed, bishop or flaring in design, that give a fascinating appearance.

Collars are often of the same material as the cuff and correspond to genre. For instance, the gauntlet cuffs mentioned above are accompanied by a high collar of the same material by a high collar of the same fur. Large, abundant directive collars and simple, smaller affairs share the stage equally. Fichu, choker and scarf effects lend.

The materials of ensemble coats lavishly include the material of the dress. Sometimes this is the principal fabric and sometimes it is utilized only as a prominent trimming. The ribbed silks, particularly ottoman and bengaline, soft-napped cloths including kasha and velours de laine, velvet, tulle and tulle are the leading fabrics for the street coat. Scotch and tartan plaid woollens are highly favored for sports coats.

Shades for Coats.

Black, green and brown shades are in the vogue for coats, and the greatest of these is brown. A full range of brown hues is seen in the new models, emphasizing russet-brown, brick, near-let, dull red and bottle green, the latter one of the season's outstanding shades. It is recommended for those to whom the brown range does not appeal.

Burmese, or, chipmunk, leopard, naturalistic, or, extraction, beaver, squirrel and the varied species of fox are the outstanding fur trimmings for fall and winter coats. These are employed principally for collars, cuffs and hemline borders. Large buttons, tassels, braids and self trimmings applied in such a manner as to give a contrasting effect are among other outstanding trimmings of the season.

Straight lines feature the vast majority of ensemble coats, and there is less of the flared effect than in any other part of the feminine wardrobe. When the flare does occur, it is usually accompanied by a slightly fitted waistline.

Sleeves and waistlines follow the general tendencies of other coats. The sleeves are fairly ample and frequently fur-trimmed, while the high standing collar is an invariable note.

Fine woollen, suede-finish materials, velvet, kasha, velours de laine, tulle and fur are the outstanding materials.

The lining of the coat is nearly always the identical material of the principal fabric of the dress.

Brown, dark red and green are the leading shades. A characteristic ensemble touch is the combination of a dark colored coat and a contrasting, bright-hued dress.

The straight silhouette is rarely varied, and when it is the hemline flare is very slight. The waistline is usually not marked.

Materials are more sumptuous than in regular daytime dresses. In addition to the ribbed silks—ottoman, bengaline and faille—there are crepe silks, satins, plaided georgette, broadened chiffon, printed and broadened velvets, olive lame shot with color and metallic flecks de sole. Sometimes an entire tunic is developed in a plaid or pelt.

The bright tones of red, green, black and gray are the most significant shades of a very diversified color range. Vividness is the basic color note of the ensemble dress or tunic-blouse.

Negative Beauty

Perhaps the most to be aimed at in domestic architecture is negative beauty, a condition of things which invites or suggests beauty to those who are capable of the sentiment, because a house, truly viewed, is but a setting, a background, and is not to be pushed to the front and made much of for its own sake. It is for shelter, for comfort, for health and hospitality, to ent and sleep in, to be born in and to die in, and it is to accord in appearance with the honest everyday usages, and with natural, universal objects and scenes.—John Burroughs.

Few Horses in Cities

When the small boy saw a colt, while on a summer outing, he said ruefully, "Who pulled his rockers off?" It will soon become necessary for illustrators to include the horse and cow in the animal book from which the average child gets his knowledge of the world about him, since not one youngster in a thousand sees a horse in the city. When a child comes to the word "carriage" in a story, it must be explained to him as chariot and litter or howdah are explained, since he never sees one, unless it be in the motion picture.

MONUMENT TO FIRST PREACHER

Towns of Black Hills Honor
"Preacher Smith."

Ston. Falls, N. D.—Elaborate exercises marked the dedication of a monument to Rev. Henry Weston Smith, known as "Preacher" Smith, who was the first "sky pilot" to enter the Black Hills after the discovery of gold. The monument, which was erected with funds contributed by the people of the different states and towns in the Black Hills, stands near the exact spot, three miles from Deadwood, where "Preacher" Smith was killed by Indians on August 20, 1875.

At the time of being killed he was on his way from Deadwood to Crook City, a town of the district, to preach. It was a curious coincidence that "Preacher" Smith and "Wild Bill" Hickok—men representing the two extremes of society—should die violent deaths in the same month, "Wild Bill" having been assassinated by John McCall on August 2, 1876, while seated with other men in a Deadwood saloon playing cards.

"Preacher" Smith lived in a log cabin in Deadwood, and before departing for his ill-fated trip to Crook City he had written the following words on a card, which he fastened to his cabin door: "Gone to Crook City to preach, and if God is willing, will be back at three o'clock."

Killed by Indians.

He never returned alive, for at about 10 o'clock that morning he was killed by Sioux Indians on the top of what was known as Big Hill, over which the crude road to Crook City wound its way. Information of the killing of the "sky pilot" created intense excitement among the rough-and-ready citizens, then making up the population of the young Deadwood, which at the time was termed the wildest mining camp in the world.

A posse was quickly formed by heavily armed men, who started out to punish the Indians. Members of the posse had several skirmishes with the Sioux raiders that same afternoon, killing several of them, but themselves losing five of their men. When members of the posse made their way back to Deadwood, where the body of the slain "sky pilot" had been taken, they found "Calamity Jane," a noted frontier woman, and "Kit" Arnold, a familiar character in Deadwood in the early days, laying out the body of the dead stowaway in his cabin for burial. "Calamity Jane" said, with tears streaming down her face:

"Isn't it too bad that the only man who came here to tell us how to live had to be killed by the Indians?"

Preached in Saloon.

On one occasion "Preacher" Smith, at invitation of the proprietors, held religious services in the saloon and preaching den of "Whitell Hall," an early Deadwood character. "Whitell Hall" had shaved back his hair, for the occasion. All was orderly and quiet during the time "Preacher" Smith was preaching his sermon, to the assembled roughs and others, who contributed liberally to him in cash at the conclusion of his remarks.

Some men entering the Black Hills had permitted "Preacher" Smith to accompany them, and one evening one of them found him reading a Bible. From the stranger informed the men that he was a Methodist minister. He was told that he was up against a hard proposition, to which he replied: "Familiarly so, but I will do the best I can." His only baggage when he entered the Black Hills was a small valise. He was a man about six feet tall and of fine physique. His age at the time he reached Deadwood was about forty. He came West from the New England states to preach the gospel among the rough men of that day.

Mr. Butterfly Likes Boozie,
but Wife Sticks to Water

London, England.—That male butterflies like to get drunk while female ones stick to water and are perfectly content with water as a beverage is the discovery of Ecologist Butt after experiments along these lines.

He kept all sorts of butterflies in his wire-screened garden and exposed several bowls, containing either pure water or whiskey of different brands. The male butterflies invariably took to the liquor bowls and slipped so long that they fell off the rims and rolled on the ground.

The female butterflies, however, behaved, and without exception shunned the alcohol.

Rhodas says it is his intention to invite a few of his old friends to take dinner with him in 1927, on which occasion the ham will be served and its fiftieth anniversary appropriately celebrated.

Certainly Was Dumb.

In Lancashire the victim of nearly every funny story is the "fucker," an onlooker in a mill. He is invariably made out to be an extremely stupid fellow. The following is a typical example as told by White Chaffin.

"Two fackers, dressed in their Sunday best, met in the street, and one remarked to the other:

"Why, Bill, how nice your suit looks. You only had it new the same time as mine and look how mine has gone out of shape."

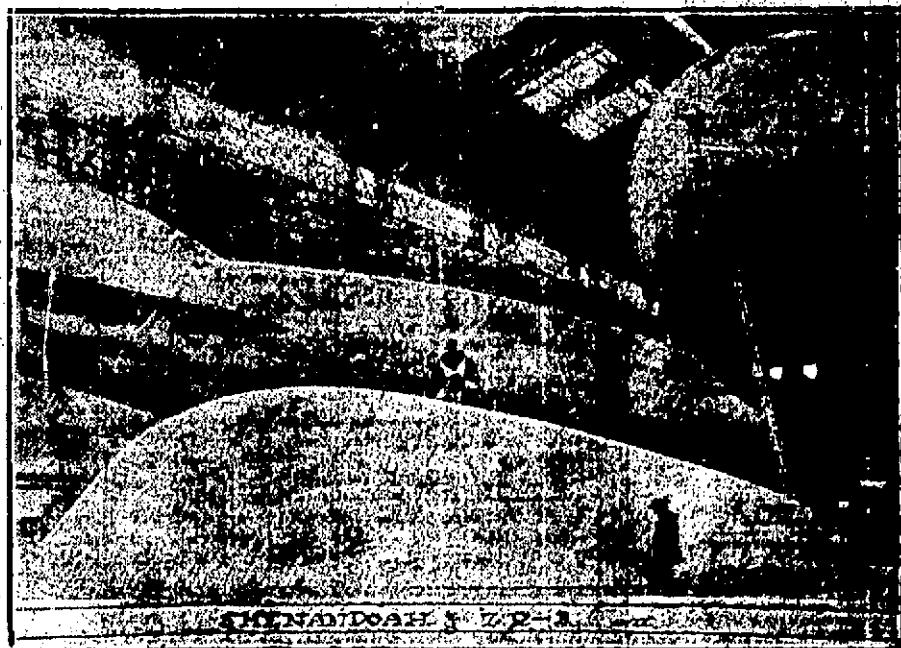

"Well," remarked Bill, "you should do the same as I do; get one of them coat hangers."

"His friend's face brightened and he departed full of glee. They met again some time later."

"Well," said Bill, "did you get that coat hanger I told you about?"

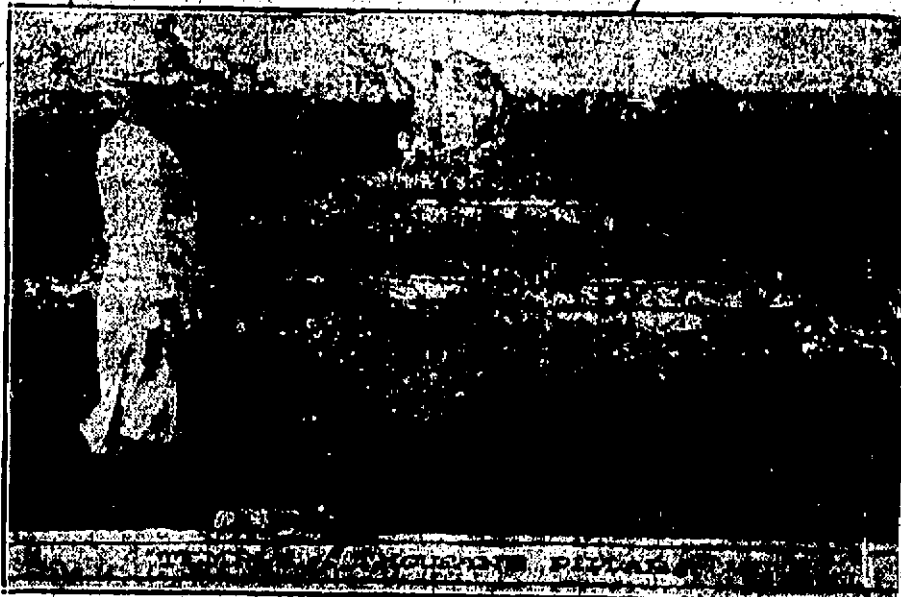

"Yes," replied the other, "but the blooming thing made my shoulders sore."

NOTABLE MAYA RUINS ARE BEING UNCOVERED.

Wonderful disclosures of the ancient Maya civilization of Yucatan are already resulting from the expedition of the Carnegie Institute and the Mexican Government. The excavation just now centers about the "Castle," central figure in the "Temple of a Thousand Pillars." The photograph shows a native Maya Indian on guard over the ruins at Chichén Itzá, Yucatán.

CHINESE "REDS" FIRE CITY OF CANTON

The Merchant Volunteer Corps, of Canton, China, known as the Chinese Fascists, has been defeated by the "Red Army," composed of Chinese laborers, after a two-day fight in the city streets. A conflagration resulted from the hostilities that was brought under control only after 37,000,000 men had been slain. Many were killed and burned to death. The fighting had no connection with the Shanghai war.

HURRICANES ARE SUMMER FEATURE

As Ancient in Origin as Ocean and Continent

Washington, D. C.—Botanists might have added to the four things which are "new" to the world, the mysterious way of a hurricane over sea and land, for little was known of the workings of weather until a generation or so ago. Now science has learned what this super-wise king found too difficult, so that the Atlantic coast was fully warned against the storm which lashed it from Florida to New York the latter part of August.

Seasons, hurricanes and the conditions that cause them are subject of the following bulletin from the Washington (D. C.) headquarters of the National Geographic Society:

Summer Event for Ages

"The so-called West Indian hurricanes that cripple a Gulf of Mexico city or an Atlantic coast port every so often are probably as ancient in their origin as the Atlantic ocean, and the North American continent," says the bulletin. "They are the creatures of atmospheric temperature and pressure, and variations in these in turn are caused by the sun beating down on the expanses of Atlantic water and the land masses of our continent. The first such storm ever recorded devastated parts of Cuba in 1492.

"Annually, between July and October about two hurricanes are born somewhere east of the Caribbean sea, usually to sweep westward, then northward, and finally back northeastward, their paths forming pretty accurate semicircular curves. The primary factor in the births and careers of these storms is believed to be an area of high atmospheric pressure or 'high,' that exists practically permanently over the Middle Atlantic. In other words, a great blanket of heavy, sluggish air lies continually over this area, along its southern edge the tropics little swirling disturbances occur which are the seeds of possible hurricanes. But there is a certain limit to their growth among these storms, especially in winter and spring. Then the Atlantic 'high' extends in a broad band as far as the North American continent, forming in effect a fence of heavy air which the storms cannot pass. Confined to the tropics they are dissipated without causing the United States any concern.

"But, when summer heat has warmed up the land the 'high' withdraws to its ocean home, leaving out like an air peninsula toward America. The atmosphere over the land becomes an arm for shifting 'highs' and 'lows.' It is as though an atmospheric football game were in progress. The newly born storms of the tropical Atlantic region seek because of the general drift of the atmosphere, to move northward. The 'highs' whether stationary or in motion, furnish the interference which they must dodge. The weakest place in the defense is between the permanent mid-Atlantic 'high' and the American coast. Most tropical hurricanes, therefore, cannot to avoid the mid-ocean barrier, and then dash northward well east of the coast. Once around the end of the 'high' they swing northward and continue on even into Europe.

"Some of the storms do not have such plain sailing. If the Atlantic 'high' extends farther westward than usual, the disturbances must swing over the land to round the end. It is upon such rather infrequent occasions that the Atlantic coast suffers as it did in August.

Sometimes Herded Into Gulf.

"By a still farther westward extension of the high pressure area the storms are prevented from moving north and sweep into the Gulf of Mexico. It was such conditions that brought about the terribly destructive Galveston hurricane in September, 1900, and that which cost many lives at Corpus Christi in September, 1918. The Galveston storm turned northward, passing through Texas and Oklahoma, and finally passed to the Atlantic down the St. Lawrence valley. The Corpus Christi hurricane, however, belonged to the rare type with an approximately straight path. A chain of 'highs' formed an impassable barrier to the north and the storm moved on into Mexico where it was finally dissipated among the mountains.

"Hurricanes are not winds that blow straight ahead. They are swirls of the cyclonic type. These swirling storm centers move relatively slowly across sea and land, sometimes at no greater speed than eight or ten miles an hour. But they suck air toward them from all sides at terrific speeds, up to 100 or more miles an hour.

"The United States weather bureau had rather poor facilities for tracing tropical storms until after the Spanish-American war in 1898 when reporting stations were established in the West Indies. Now, with the development of radio, ship reports make it possible to keep still closer track of these potentially destructive storms."

Woman's Field Is Unlimited
Oakland, Cal.—Mrs. Harriet Gunn Robinson, Washington educator, addressing a local women's club recently, said that out of 807 distinct professions in the United States women are engaged in all but 85. There are many women bank presidents, the speaker said, and two women railroad presidents.

Climbing a Tall Smokestack
When a huge steel smokestack of a power house needed painting and it was found rather difficult to arrange a tackle to haul up a man, the fireman made a parachute that fitted snugly inside of the stack. He attached a spring to the parachute and allowed the draft in the stack to carry it up. A small rope was next tied to the spring and pulled up, and finally a rope strong enough to hold the tackle, which was arranged to hoist up the painter.—Popular Mechanics Magazine

MRS. WHITNEY PREPARES WAR MEMORIAL FOR FRANCE

Above is shown the model of the war memorial designed by Mrs. Mary Payne Whitney, wife of the multi-millionaire New York sportsman, to be unveiled June 26, 1936, on the rocks in the harbor of St. Nazaire, France. It is called the "Spirit of the American Eagle," and will be the gift of the American St. Nazaire Society to the French to commemorate the landing of the first American troops at St. Nazaire on June 26, 1917.

TROOPS PUT DOWN K. K. K. RIOTING

Twelve men were wounded, nine by gunshot, in open warfare in Niles, O., between Ku Klux Klansmen and Knights of the Flaming Circle. The rioting ended only when State troops were rushed into the city. The rioting started during a scheduled parade of the hooded K. K. K. through the streets. This photograph shows members of the Klan being sworn in as police of their own forces in the presence of their King Klans, (at right).
